THE CZECH BOOK MARKET

In the Czech Republic, a country with over 10 million inhabitants, the dominant language is Czech. Due to a number of inhabitants, the Czech book market size is rather small. However, since a literary culture had a direct impact on shaping of the national identity, the book market in the Czech Republic is, owing to this long tradition, relatively diverse.

There are more than 15 300 book titles published in the Czech Republic every year. Of these, approximately 35% are translations from other languages.

The total turnover of the Czech book market amounts to approximately 305 million euro. The average book price corresponds to a purchasing power of the inhabitants and it is approximately 12 euro.

The Czech market diversity manifests itself also in a great number of publishers. So far, the monopolization is not as significant as in some other countries. Only roughly 30 biggest publishing houses publish more than 100 books per year. A company with the highest amount of about 1100 titles per year is Albatros Media, followed by Euromedia Group with 800 titles. Nevertheless, share of the top five publishing houses on the book market accounts only for about 12%, and only the top 236 publishing houses reach 70%. In 2014, 317 publishing houses published more than 10 books per year. In case of these entities, it is possible to speak about commercial operation of the publishing business.

The Czech economy can be described as a developed market economy and the overwhelming majority of publishing houses is private. However, there is no lack of university presses, publishing houses of various institutes, etc., among them either.

The VAT rate on books is currently 10% in the Czech Republic. In the past, the rate was established at even only 5%, although in 2014 it reached 15%. Subsequently, it decreased to its current level.

The Ministry of Culture of the Czech Republic awards grants mostly for publishing original Czech literature both at home and abroad. Within a focus area of a grant, there is a possibility to apply for a financial support for translation of highly valuable literary works into Czech language. The amount of provided financial support for translating Czech books abroad is about 600 thousand euro per year.

The most significant book event in the Czech Republic is the annual book fair Book World, traditionally held in Prague in May. Almost 40,000 visitors attend the fair and about 400 both Czech and foreign exhibitors display their products at this event.

The VAT rate on electronic books is 21%. The electronic book market share in case of e.g. fiction accounts for only about 2%, however, this segment is dynamically growing and developing every year.

The Association of Czech Booksellers and Publishers is a professional organization representing the interests of publishers, distributors and booksellers. It was founded as early as 1879 and therefore has a long tradition. During the communist dictatorship between 1948 and 1989, it was not possible to pursue association activities. At that time, private enterprises were prohibited as well, which led to a demise of private publishing houses and bookshops, or their nationalisation and subsequent existence as a state property. The Association of Czech Booksellers and Publishers was re-established in 1990.

Currently, the Association brings together the majority of significant entities of the book market. It is a member of FEP – Federation of European Publishers and it engages both in legislative matters concerning the book market and copyright law, and many campaigns aimed at book and reading promotion.

The Association of Czech Booksellers and Publishers is a registered voluntary association with its highest body being the General Meeting of all members.

A statutory body of the Association is the Board of Directors consisting of 11 members who are elected by the general meeting.

The Association is externally represented by the Chairman of the Board who acts in the name of the Association. The post is unpaid. The executive employee of the Association is the Executive Secretary paid by the Association.

This was where the publishing house's general future orientation originated. The first titles it published came out as paperbacks and hardbacks, and Volvox Globator's expediently conceptual effort was the result of many years of experience. Nowadays it publishes around 50 high quality titles a year, all with fine graphic layout. In terms of genres, Volvox Globator specialises in publishing cutting-edge fiction, although factual literature, philosophy and works on religion also play an equally important role. It naturally collaborates with leading Czech translators and artists, a fact that is reflected in the number of literary awards it has won (best translation of the year).
